Center for Science and Technology Policy Research
Briefing #3, 30 June 2006

In 2006, we launched a new email briefing about our Center's science policy work. We are working to improve how science and technology policies address societal needs. Please let us know what information you might like to receive by emailing us. A pdf of this briefing is also attached. If you wish to be removed from the mailing list, please click here.

▸ About the Center

▸ Prometheus is the Center's weblog. Recent posts:

The Climate Policy Equivalent of Graham-Rudman-Hollings

New anti-wind politics details. Oh the irony, Senator Warner

The Curious Case of Storm Surge and Sea Level Rise in the IPCC TAR

▸ Sample of Recent Publications:

Is the time right to rethink NASA as an institution?
Pielke, R.A., Jr., 2006. How to Break up NASA. Bridges, Vol. 10, June.

An analysis of the recent failure of a referendum in Italy to repeal a law limiting medically assisted fertilization, and the broader implications for science and technology in society:
Corbellini, G., 2006. Reproductive medicine, politics and religion in Italy: Reflections on the 2005 referendum, Ogmius newsletter, Issue 15.

In the climate change debate, as in others, we should give greater weight to peer reviewed science produced through the scientific method than to claims produced by less rigorous methods and that are paid by, and designed to benefit, financial and political elites:
Lahsen, M., 2005. Technocracy, Democracy, and U.S. Climate Politics: The Need for Demarcations. Science, Technology & Human Values, Vol. 30, No.1, pp. 137-169.

All articles are available via download from our website or can be requested by mail.

▸ Media Resources

Hurricanes and Global Warming

Politicization of Science

Space Policy

Drought Policy

To see an archive of past briefings, click here. If you would like to unsubscribe from this mailing list, please contact ami@cires.colorado.edu.   Please note that we do not share our mailing lists with anyone for any reason.